

College of Osteopathic Medicine

6436 S. Racine Circle, Suite 110
Centennial, CO 80111-6479
Main: 303-373-2008
Fax: 720-875-2875

NEWS RELEASE

For Immediate Release

May 15, 2008

Contact: Karen Harolds
303.373.2008, x109
kharolds@rockyvistauniversity.org

Rocky Vista University faculty serve as volunteers for Doctor of the Day at the Colorado State Capital

Parker Colo. - During the 2008 Legislative Session in Colorado, five members of the inaugural faculty of Rocky Vista University participated in the 18-year-old tradition of serving as volunteer Doctor of the Day at the Colorado State Capital.

Matthew Harrison, D.O., Joseph Stasio, D.O., Kelli Glaser, D.O., Camille Bentley, D.O., and Thomas Mohr, D. O., donated their time and service as Doctor's of the Day for the legislators and staff at the capitol as participants in the program sponsored by the Colorado Academy of Family Physicians (CAFP).

The doctor of the Day's responsibilities include; treating any legislative representatives with medical issues that might otherwise impede their ability to conduct the business of the day, as well as on site emergency care for any person in need of their expertise. This program relies solely on volunteer physicians and donations of supplies.

Rocky Vista University College of Osteopathic Medicine, the newest medical school in Colorado, will matriculate its inaugural class of approximately 150 future osteopathic physicians in August of 2008; the college has accumulated an outstanding faculty and staff and, in addition to the education of its students, is dedicated to providing professional service to underserved and disadvantaged populations to improve access to health care and improve the health status of the citizens of Colorado and the Mountain West Region.

#####